Protect Your Paper Files: Guard Them or Shred Them

Much of the focus of Identity Theft prevention is on the dangers of online commerce and other scams that may result in stolen identities. While it is definitely important to stay safe in cyberspace, it is also important to guard your "personal" space in the "real" world.

An Identity Fraud Survey Report, released several years ago, shows that people should not ignore the more traditional world when taking steps to protect their personal identity. The survey revealed that among the most frequently reported sources of information used to commit identity fraud were friends, acquaintances, relatives or corrupt employees who had access to personal information.

Protect your identity by making sure that any out-of-date personal information is shredded and any current information is stored in an adequately protected location.
